CALL FOR PAPERS

Changing circumstances in our society gave rise to differing pictures; despite our expectations of better working conditions, and better status, developments in many countries reveal a different situation.

Is it possible at all to make a living as LITs today? What can we learn from those countries where LITs seem to have achieved a better position? What does the LIT landscape now look like?

Contributors are requested to send abstracts of their papers (max. 250 words) and short CVs to sofia-conference@eulita.eu by 15 January 2018.

The proposed topics are:

- Strengthening cooperation between LITs and legal professionals through joint training
- Promotion of good practice and professional ethics in Legal Interpreting and Translation (LIT)
- The impact of EU legislation on different settings
- Working with rarer languages
- Different job profiles for LITs
- Future prospects

The preliminary programme, the venue and other details of the conference will be announced in January 2018.
